

Jenny Wong, PharmD, BCPS

Jenny Wong graduated from University of Washington School of Pharmacy in 2007 and completed her ASHP-accredited residency at University of Washington Medicine . She is now a critical care pharmacist at the UW Medicine for more than 10 years. Her clinical specialty is cardiovascular and cardiothoracic surgery service. Her passion is to provide safe and effective medicine to patients through innovation and collaboration with multidisciplinary teams. Jenny leads multiple initiatives surrounding anticoagulation practices in high risk population and participates in various institutional committees to ensure patient safety outcomes. Over the years, she has precepted both pharmacy students and residents to foster critical thinking skills and promote growth mindset. She was recognized and received a Certificate of Merit in Precepting from the University of Washington School of Pharmacy (UWSOP). Jenny has served as a Rho Chi advisor at the UWSOP for ten years and enjoyed assisting the organization alongside with the students. Jenny also serves as a PGY1 pharmacy residency program coordinator at UW Medicine. Her duties include coordinating resident orientation schedules, enhancing learning experience, conducting research projects, and coordinating conference meetings. An opportunity to serve as a Rho Chi region VII councilor will allow her to better serve the student organization in providing insights and recommendations.